

Process Engineer – Pharmaceutical Manufacturing

POSITION SUMMARY

One of the top manufacturing in the pharmaceutical industry located in Haikou, Province of Hainan, is looking for technical professional to add to its continuously expanding workforce, offering professional growth and advancement. The company has an ambitious pipeline to develop many new drug products for export into the U.S. market.

The Process Engineer is responsible for the design, development, validation, verification and implementation of new and revised manufacturing processes. She/he works to continuously improve the quality. The process engineer participates as a member of product realization teams to ensure product design for manufacturability and is responsible for transfer of new products or product changes into production and supply chain.

MAJOR AREAS OF RESPONSIBILITIES

- Collaborate with R&D and Production to develop and implement processes and associated documents for new products, product changes and product line extensions
- Support transfer of new products and product changes from R&D to production and supply chain teams
- Design/develop new and continuously improve existing manufacturing processes operations to enable new product launches
- Support process risk assessment activities in order to identify critical process parameters and develop appropriate control plans to mitigate risks
- Support the development of Validation Master Plans for manufacturing processes and develop and execute validation protocols in accordance with established regulations, policies, and procedures
- Comply with the Health & Safety policies of the company and inform Management of unsafe working conditions
- Adhere to all requirements of the Quality Management System following GMPs
- Other duties as required

QUALIFICATIONS/SKILLS

- An Engineering degree or equivalent
- Minimum 3 year related working experience
- Preferable experience in process design, pharmaceutical industry and manufacturing aseptic techniques
- Proficient in MS Office; Excel, Word, PowerPoint
- Excellent analytical and communication skills (both written and oral)
- Organization and time management skills
- Ability to work in cross-functional teams
- Must be fluent in Mandarin and proficient in reading, writing and speaking English.

Apply Now

Please send your resume in confidence to kjiang@acic.com, in English.

While we thank all applicants, only those chosen for interviews will be contacted.